An unprecedented “Screening Game show” in which challengers draw a fine boarder line between what is “YES” and what is “NO”.

The game is a match play by 2 teams.

The challengers are called “screeners” and they are to sort out the ones that fit into the category given as the theme of the game:

“Is the person a man dressed like a woman... or a real woman?”

“Did he/she succeed in a diet to lose 30 kg... or simply skinny from the beginning?”

“Is the person in his/her 20s... or in the 40s?”

“Does the mother have 3 kids... or 5 kids?”

The examinees are placed in a separate room. Screeners’ eyes are the only means to decide “YES” or “NO” as they watch the examinees on a screen.

The screeners are allowed to ask one single question to their examinees. For example in the screening of “A man dressed like a woman”, they may ask the examinees “to sneeze” or “to pose like a ballerina” to see how truly feminine their movements are.

The “screener” picks one out of 8 examinees, the selected one comes out to the studio and reveals the truth of the matter. If the answer is correct, the examinee shakes hand with the screener. But if it is wrong, and in most cases a wrong answer can be quite rude or insulting to the examinee, the examinee will fire the “Bazooka” specially made for the show. Bazooka shot of carbonized gas filled with his/her anger blasts into the face of the screener!!

The team with the most correct answers is the winner and rewarded with prize money.
