CRACK THE MYSTERY COMMAND

An adventure reality show where two paired teams are taken to an unfamiliar country to accomplish a mission that is given to them. Sound familiar?

But.... the teams are given a mission, called the “Mystery Command,” in the local language, so they must start from figuring out what their mission actually is! Running against each other and the time limit of ten days, the teams scramble out to the city/town because interpreting the Mystery Command is the first challenge to winning the cash prize.

The teams can ask the local people to help them decipher the Mystery Command, but they can only use their mother tongue and gestures. Also, during the course of the challenge, the teams are randomly summoned to undertake a task, often appalling or outrageous, and if it is carried out successfully, they are granted 30 seconds to look up words in a bilingual dictionary. Moreover, at the end of each day the teams are given the chance to guess the meaning of the foreign words. Correct answers get them closer to deciphering the mission, but incorrect answers brutally leave the team to forfeit either “their accommodation for the night” or “three meals the following day”

Will either team be able to figure out what the mission is and carry it out in time to win the prize money? Will they be able to suffer the harsh reality of being left with the bare minimum in a completely foreign land? Let the mission begin.
